Turning your dearly departed into a Living Reef

Eternal Reefs(tm) Inc. is a business with strong ties to the Reef Ball Group Ltd. The business provides an ecologically sound option for cremated remains. By integrating the ashes into the structures that reefs, Eternal Reefs provide living memorials that are both ecologically cost effective.

The idea was born when Carleton Glen Palmer, father of one of the members of RBDG and terminally ill, requested that his cremated remains be memorialized in reef balls and made into an Eternal Reef. In May 2007, Nautilus and 20 Aquarius memorial reef units were cast and deployed to a memorial reef.

There are a few different kinds of structures available:

A Marine Sanctuary Reef is a protected area that is aimed at rebuilding an ecosystem and providing a sanctuary for marine life. A Diving Reef is a more public area for recreation that is not protected from marine life. The reef units are donated to state, county and local government for ongoing reef development programs. Options include certificates, plaques, dedications and deployments.
