

Pins attached to the top of the box.

Maybe something like a box with an angle bracket on the bottom that could slide onto a bottom and then be clamped down into place to help seal the edge.

If the top isn't stiff enough to take the upward pressure of the ball, maybe some stringers across the top just outside of the bottom flange of the mold that could be held in place by clamps might hold the contraption in place.

